Surrendered To Who?

July 8, 1978

By Cheryl Adams
Rising Senior at A.C.H.S.

Recently, while touring the Appomattox Historical Park for the unnumbered time, someone stopped me and asked quietly: "Who surrendered to who? Was it Lee to Grant, or Grant to Lee?" The reader may wonder that perhaps this person's home is located in Seattle, Washington or possibly Baghdad, there fore giving good reason for asking such a question. Not quite. The perplexed questioner resides in the Town of Appomattox. I paused for a moment and then proceeded to answer. I was neither surprised nor shocked. This is only one of such experiences, for it has happened to me many tii. and I expect it to happen man, times again because, unfortunately, it is most common.

Suddenly I began to think of the many different license plates in the parking lot. Many were miles away from home as I noticed the ones from Michigan, Ohio, New York, California, and even one from Alaska. As I thought of these people, it occurred to me that they were the ones that remember the historical moments made in this little town, and it was these people who know the simple fact of who surrendered to who. And that is why they come here. To see where it happened.

I came out of my contemplative state of mind and turned to join my group who had long since left me behind. How they rushed through it! Why, of the countless times I had been there, I always found something new - and fascinating. And the little village never failed to bring me a calm, serene feeling of peace, as it remained undisturbed and uncommercialized through the years.

I can barely comprehend that I am here, where something great happened! I walk the sidewalk that General Lee himself walked and peer into the little parlor where the future of a great nation was decided.

I failed to understand the reason of rushing throught the tour without stopping at every point, examining each monument and artifact very carefully and allowing the mind to drift back to an April day in 1865. Just to picture the scenes: the quiet village, the bedraggled soldiers, some crying unashamedly in defeat, the others rejoicing in victory, but both grateful that the struggle was over. Then the generals arriving at the McLean House; Lee remaining proud to the very end and Grant humble with a new generosity, is a tour in itself.

Once again I looked about me and discovered that most of the group had finished the entire tour and I was still standing in front of the McLean House. Those of us remaining made a hasty completion of the tour and left the park shortly thereafter.

As we zoomed down the highway, passing Lee and Grant's headquarters without even slowing down to realize that the last strategy of war and plans for peace in our nation were made in those spots, and for a long moment I felt like crying as I wondered: Why are we so ungrateful, so careless, and most importantly, why do we take it all for granted? True, most of us living in the County of Appomattox have been to the "Surrender Grounds," numerous times, but does that give us a good reason to make a joke of it, and refuse to gain a new experience each time we set foot there? And showing our guests that we are not too proud of the history made here is what I call the pits.

And I did say proud, because that's exactly what we should be. How many small towns in the United States can say that peace was found there and a long struggle ended? Or to go a little further, how many towns and even cities can say that anything happened worth remembering there? This is why it is so important that we remain proud and thankful. Appomattox and the state of Virginia are indeed blessed in historical and natural beauty.

My goal is merely to see visitors return home with the thought that the citizens of Appomattox love where they live and know the who, what, where, when, why and how of its past and present as well. And anyone can do it. Just be proud of where you live and let it show when you speak of Appomattox. Oh, and also, it would be rather helpful if you remember that it was Lee who surrendered to Grant.

CLAUDE ANDERSON, MEMBER OF THE VIRGINIA HOUSE OF DELEGATES FROM THE 27TH DISTRICT, WAS ONE OF THE SPEAKERS in a brief ceremony transferring the keys to a new $195,388 fire truck from Longwood College to the Town of Farmville. The purchase of the truck, which features an 85-foot aerial tower, was recommended by the State Fire Marshal because of Longwood's high-rise dormitories and was funded by a special appropriation of the General Assembly. The truck will be leased for $1 per year to the Farmville Fire Department who will operate and maintain it. The ceremony was held during Longwood's annual Fourth of July picnic for students, faculty, and staff.

house of cards, and eventually it will have to fall if no further initiatives are taken to address the income issues," Patterson concluded.

STATE PRISON ESCAPES ON DECLINE

The further drop in the yearly escape total came despite a continuing rise in the number of inmates confined, a figure which reached 8,147 on June 30.

After a peak of 578 escapes in fiscal year 1974, a year which ended with 5,886 adult inmates confined, escapes have declined steadily. There were 392 in fiscal 1975, 303 in fiscal 1976, 136 in fiscal 1977 and 78 in fiscal 1978.

Corrections officials attribute the reduction to continuing improvements in the classifications of inmates and in the handling of their records, expanded staff training programs, and more control of such programs as furlough and work release.

Fidelity American Announces Eighth Consecutive Earnings Increase

LYNCHBURG - Second quarter earnings data just released by Fidelity American Bankshares shows the $1 billion multi-bank holding company to be well ahead of projected goals disclosed earlier this year. Announcement of the organization's eighth consecutive increase in quarterly net operating income was made today by Alvin Clements, President and Chief Executive Officer.

Specifically, net operating income in the second quarter grew to $1,882 million or $0.69 per share from $1.365 million or $0.52 per share for the same quarter of 1977 (restated for the effect of lease capitalization). For the first half of 1978, net operating income per share totals $1.29 versus $1.03 for the preceding year, an increase of 25.2%.

Net income also rose during the second quarter of 1978, reaching a level of $0.65 per share compared to $0.54 for the same period last year. On a year-to-date basis, net income per share stands at $1.24 relative to $1.14 for the first six months of 1977.

The company has just successfully introduced its first automatic teller machines at four branches of its Virginia Beach affiliate. Strong initial customer acceptance and usage of these "Time Machines" has prompted Fidelity American to accelerate its implementation of this program.

The consolidation of four of the organization's Eastern banks (Tidewater, Hampton Roads, Virginia Beach and Williamsburg) into a single regional affiliate has been approved by the Federal Reserve and will take effect at the close of business on September 30. Management has revealed plans to merge a fifth bank, its Eastern Shore affiliate, into this new Fidelity American Bank.

Preliminary filing of the proposed Fidelity American/Central National consolidation has been made earlier this week with the Federal Reserve. Special meetings of each company's stockholders are planned in late September to secure their approval.

Clements expressed optimism in Fidelity American's growth and earnings prospects. "We have seen this company make great progress during the past several years, and we are currently well ahead of the performance goals we established for 1978." He noted that a substantially reduced and less rate-sensitive corporate debt, improved asset/liability management, a strengthened loan portfolio and firmly established management controls have better positioned Fidelity American to deal with economic pressures arising from tight money, heightened inflation and increased interest rates.

Fidelity American Bankshares is a $1 billion Virginia multi-bank holding company with 15 statewide bank affiliates having 81 offices and seven non-bank affiliates.
